Patrick Ang, is a TTC certified trained teacher, who taught English. After teaching for 8 years, he left the teaching profession and went on to become an adman, where he serviced major clients for 8 years, working for several international ad agencies which included, Grant, K & E, Leo Burnett and J.Walter Thompson. He is a Diploma holder in Marketing, Advertising and PR practice, with the Institute of Marketing UK, and CAM UK (Communications Advertising Marketing).

In 1977, he took up the position as Publishing Manager with MPH Magazines, managing leading titles SILVER KRIS, MABUHAY, FEMALE, NUYOU and TORQUE. Patrick stayed with MPH for 20 years, and rose to become the General Manager and Director of the company, heading the Singapore and Malaysian Publishing Division of the Jack Chia-MPH Group of companies.

He retired from MPH in 1997, and was re-employed in 1998 by IBC Publishing, a UK international conference management company, to head a start-up publishing company to do trade publishing for the Asia Pacific region. He left IBC in 1999 to become a publishing consultant, offering publishing management services to media related clients and aspiring writers.

In 2006 he was offered by Dan Poynter, an international speaker and trainer-coach, to organise and conduct seminars and workshops on Book Writing and Self Publishing. Patrick is now planning in 2008, to work with Dan Poynter to start the Dan Poynter School of Writing and Publishing.
